Date: June 28, 2013

Location: The Conference & Event Center at NJHA

Registration: 7:30 a.m. – 8 a.m.

Program: 8 a.m. – 3:30 p.m.

Pressure ulcers are a common, serious and significant healthcare occurrence in the frail and elderly, causing pain, disfigurement and slow recovery from co-morbid conditions, as well as interfering with activities of daily living. Pressure ulcers are strongly associated with mortality and lengthy stays in acute, post-acute and long term care settings.

Every year, pressure ulcers affect over 1 million patients and residents in hospitals and nursing homes. Costs associated with pressure ulcer treatment exceed $1.335 billion and of that, more than $355 million is spent on treatment in the long term care setting. While financial costs associated with pressure ulcers are high, the human toll of pain, depression, altered self-image, stress, infection and increased mortality and morbidity is immeasurable. Hospital-acquired pressure ulcers are associated with a greater risk of death within one year of hospitalization.

Pressure ulcers are one of the healthcare-acquired conditions being targeted in the national campaign to reduce harm, and in N.J. will be building on the great work that has been completed to date.

Objectives:

- To understand and discuss current best practices for staging pressure ulcers
- Identify infectious aspects of chronic wounds including infection control, and discuss strategies to decrease the incidence of infections in pressure ulcers for patients across the continuum of care
- To define interdisciplinary collaborative processes for the prevention of post-operative heel pressure ulcers
- Analyze the National Pressure Ulcer Advisory Panel (NPUAP) development of a uniform terminology, test methods and reporting standards for support surfaces and provide an objective means to improve the understanding of the importance of support surfaces

Target Audience:

Physicians. Nurses, long term care, quality, patient safety, pharmacy and risk management.
